

Inside the Mind of the Elite Player

By David Curtis

Enter the Magical world of the Elite Player and learn his Powerful Secrets about women that 95% of men will never know

Copyright© 2008—David Curtis-www.alphadater.com-All Rights Reserved

Table of Contents

Introduction

Chapter 1--How the Player is Totally Different from Other Guys

Chapter 2--What Makes Elite Players Successful with Women

Chapter 3--Why "Nice Guys" Finish Last

Chapter 4--How Elite Players Get Women to Want Them

Chapter 5--Approaching Women like an Elite Player

Chapter 6--How Elite Players Get Women into Bed

Chapter 7--How Elite Players Deal With Rejection or Avoid It Completely

Chapter 8--Conclusion|

Introduction

What guy wouldn't want to be able to walk up to any woman and get her instantly attracted to him?

We all have seen that guy who is great with women. He not only can casually and comfortably approach the hottest woman in the place, but quickly and effortlessly get her laughing and flirting with him. A few short minutes later when he magically walks away with her phone number, we know that we are in the presence of an Elite Player.

So, what's his secret?

Most guys think it takes great looks, lots of money, or some secret killer pick-up line to score with women. But as you will find out in the following chapters, most Elite Players don't possess any of these things. What they do possess are the instincts and insight to know what attracts women and, maybe more importantly, what immediately turns them off.

In the following pages you will not only learn what Elite Players know about women, but how to adapt this knowledge to your own unique personality. This will enable you to raise yourself to Elite Player status without sacrificing any of your own individuality or values.

The secrets and techniques you will learn in this book took most experienced Elite Players years to learn and perfect. But in just a matter of days, or even hours, you will be ready to pick up women just like the guys you've always envied.

CHAPTER 1

How the Player is Totally Different From Other Guys

There are many different definitions of what a Player is, and how he is viewed by society. Here are a few definitions I found on line:

1. The definition of "a PLAYER", in regards to dating, is a guy who is more interested in bedding as many women as possible with no interest in committing to a long-term relationship. Or one who actively seeks out sexual partners and carries on a number of sexual affairs at the same time
2. Someone who dates more than one person at a time, usually just for sex or other perks. This person will typically do anything to have sex with someone. Term carries a heavy negative connotation, and is usually used to describe males.
3. The word womanizer (Br Eng: womanizer), playboy, philanderer, Player, ladies' man, man-whore, lady-killer and rake refer to a man who has love affairs with women he either cannot marry, will not marry, or to whom he cannot or will not commit. Typically, the love affairs are sexually motivated, with slight emotional connection and attachment.

On the surface, the Player as described above sounds like the biggest jerk on the planet. But while these descriptions represent the popular notion of what constitutes a Player, I have a totally different definition. To illustrate this definition, I have broken guys down into 3 categories:

The Observer

The Wannabe Player

The Player

Let's start with the PLAYER:

If you can think of meeting and dating women as a sporting event, the Player is the guy that is out on the field actively participating in the game. He may not always be successful, but when he fails or gets knocked down, he picks himself up, dusts himself off, and gets back into the action as quickly as possible.

The more he plays, the more experienced he gets, and the more success he has. He learns from his failures and uses what he learned to help him succeed the next time. He can do this because he knows that there is ALWAYS a next time. There is always another woman, another challenge out there that he can go after. The fact is, there is an unlimited supply of women looking for a guy who is not intimidated by them and who is willing to put himself out there regardless of the consequences.

What separates Players from the rest of the guys is that Players take the initiative, and they decide whether a woman meets his standards or are performing to his liking. Their view is that if you are not a Player, then you are being played.

The second group is made up of those I call the WANNABE PLAYERS:

The Wannabe Player is the equivalent to the bench Player. He strives to be a Player, but is missing one or more of the secrets, techniques, or attributes that would get him into the game. He mostly sits on the bench, watching the action and trying to figure out how the game is played.

When he does occasionally get into the game, he either comes on way too strong, scaring away his prey, or more likely not strong enough, creating little or no attraction in the woman he's after.

In the first case, he hasn't figured out the fine line between flirting with a woman and creeping her out. In the latter case, he is so afraid that the woman will either think he's a jerk or a sex fiend that he ends up completely avoiding anything that would cause some sexual sparks to fly. Instead, he engages a woman in some mundane or intellectual conversation that bores her to death and does nothing to build attraction or sexual tension.

The bottom line is, the Wannabe Player has the desire and willingness to put himself out there and risk failure, but just doesn't have the know-how to get the job done.

At last we come to the OBSERVER:

This is the unfortunate category that most guys find themselves in. These are the guys sitting in the stands either content with their status, or too frightened to leave their seats and venture out onto the field. They sit and watch Players perform seeming miracles of seduction with hot women the Observer would never dream of approaching in a million years.

The Observer either doesn't have the nerve to approach women, or has tried and failed to meet women in the past and has allowed these failures to completely take him out of the game. Observers usually suffer from some combination of shyness, fear of rejection, and lack of confidence.

Copyright© 2008—David Curtis-www.alphadater.com-All Rights Reserved

The main reason most Observers fail to participate however is that they have little or no idea how attraction in women works. Because of this, they allow their perceived shortcomings to stop them from even trying to play the dating game.

Observers usually think that most women only go for guys who have great looks, hunky bodies, expensive cars, or financial security. But as you will learn in the following chapters, most women are much more attracted to a guy because of how he makes her feel rather than how he looks or the size of his bank account.

In summary, the most important thing for you to do is determine which of these 3 groups you belong to and understand how to make the necessary mental and emotional adjustments to begin having more success with women.

Chapter 2

What Makes Elite Players Successful with Women

Yes, great looks and a hunky body will help a guy get his foot in the door when approaching a woman, but if he doesn't have any game, and doesn't know what attracts women, he will definitely get his foot smashed in that same door in very short order.

So what is it that makes the usually average looking Player so successful with women?

For starters, let's be clear that there are several levels of Players. Becoming effective with women does not happen overnight. During the course of this book I will make reference to Elite Players, which will refer to PLAYERS who have over time mastered the techniques and knowledge to achieve a much better rate of success than Players at a lower level still learning the ropes.

The main characteristic of successful Players at any level is that most of them were born as, or have become, alphamales. The alphamale, whatever setting he is in, has a belief that he is the most dominant male in the place. Just like in the animal kingdom, the dominant male is the one who the females are naturally attracted to. You will never achieve a mastery with women without this singular trait.

While as noted before, a number of alphamales are born that way, many alphamales are guys who through experience, education, experimentation, and failure, have learned what it takes to get what they want, not just in relationships, but in everything else in their lives as well.

The difference between the alphamale Player and all other males, and one of the main things that triggers attraction in women, is that while most males instantly and willingly give away complete control of the relationship to the female, the alphamale Player takes control of any relationship right from the start. He calls the shots, he makes the moves, he dictates the pace and direction of the action.

And if a woman acts up or tries to treat him badly, the alphamale Player will immediately call her out and let her know this type of behavior is not acceptable. He makes it perfectly clear that he is completely willing to walk away if her bad behavior continues. Take note that if you are not willing or able to walk away, you will never be in control of a relationship and will most likely end up being played even by what appears to be the nicest of girls.

Being a Player has very little to do with looks, brains, or wealth. Being a Player has almost everything to do with attitude and self-confidence. Players are usually very comfortable in their own skin and their own sense of self. It is very important to realize that how you view yourself is how others, especially women, will view you. If you are unsure of yourself, women will instantly sense this and tune you out quickly

There is no faking self-confidence. You can't use canned one-liners or body language to mimic it. If deep down you believe in yourself, so will women. If deep down you don't, neither will they.

Sure you may be able to bluff your way through for a short period of time, but it won't take long for your true belief about yourself to be exposed. And when it is, any temporary spell you may have cast over a woman will be instantly broken.

We will discuss in more detail later how Players go about creating fun for the women they approach, but basically they use teasing, flirting, or even just general silliness to get a woman laughing and having a good time. After that, it's easy.

In short, the Player is the fun, loose, self-confident guy that women want to hang out with, rather than the serious, uptight, insecure guy that they don't.

Chapter 3

Why "NICE GUYS" Finish Last

The biggest complaint by men is that women don't want guys who are nice to them. That a guy who is thoughtful, polite, and romantic is less desirable than a guy who is selfish, insensitive, and only wants a woman for sex. An online blogger summed it up this way:

"Think about it, it's the "jerk", the rude, inconsiderate, impolite, rough guy who always gets to shag the girl while the "nice guy" is waiting outside in the pouring rain with flowers in his hand."

Yet, if you ask almost any woman they will tell you they would much rather have a guy who is thoughtful, polite, and romantic, than a selfish, inconsiderate jerk. So what gives?

The first thing we need to do is define what we mean by a "Nice Guy". There is a big difference between a confident, secure guy who is generally nice and what is commonly referred to in dating circles as the "Nice Guy".

When we talk about the "Nice Guy", we are talking about a guy who tries to get women to LIKE him by putting the woman's needs and wants ahead of his own. He thinks if he is nice to a woman, helps her out when she is going through financial or emotional problems, buys her presents, and basically sacrifices his own needs, wants, and happiness for hers that she will eventually realize what a great guy he is and fall hopelessly in love with him.

Now it may be true that being nice to, or doing nice things for, a woman could result in a woman liking you, but it does nothing towards creating the strong emotional or sexual feelings in a woman that makes her want you in a romantic way. The bottom line is, "Like does not equal Love".

In fact, a guy who is too anxious to please, or who tries too hard to be liked, usually ends up being viewed by most women as submissive and insecure. Especially if he gets too clingy and starts wrapping his whole life around a woman he only just met or hardly knows.

Nice Guys will say that they are just being nice for niceness sake, but actually most of them have just as much of an agenda as any other guy. They are just using their niceness as what they believe is a path towards creating deeper and more romantic feelings in the woman they are interested in.

However, when the Nice Guy finally works up the nerve to tell the woman who he has befriended how he feels, she usually feels betrayed. Nothing turns a woman off more than a guy who seemed to be doing things for her out of friendship suddenly expecting her to return his romantic feelings. All she sees is a guy who had a hidden agenda all along, and was not really her friend in the first place. When she confronts him or distances herself from him, he then gripes about how this is what he gets for being nice.

Another problem is that Nice Guys have a tendency to fall for a girl way too fast, way too soon. After just a few dates, or sooner, the typical Nice Guy starts feeling like he can't live without a woman and is compelled to tell her this, as if that will instantly make her feel the same way towards him.

In truth, blurting out your feelings too early in a relationship actually has the exact opposite effect. It not only puts a huge amount of pressure on the woman, who has probably not yet decided how she feels, but also takes away any challenge or sense of adventure in the relationship. Nobody wants or really appreciates something if it comes too easy. In addition, a guy giving himself over too quickly or easily screams INSECURITY in a woman's mind, and even the nicest of girls will start to pull away.

Also, when the typical Nice Guy gets instantly and deeply invested in any girl who shows even the slightest amount of interest in him, he doesn't want to do anything that would rock the boat and cause her to not like him or to break up with him.

This means he's usually willing to put up with just about anything she dishes out, and will rarely speak up even in a situation where he totally disagrees with her. He will even put up with disrespectful behavior like her breaking dates, criticizing him in front of others, and generally treating him badly.

The Nice Guy also tends to believe that when he puts a woman's wants and needs ahead of his own, then she will do the same for him. This rarely if ever happens. Whoever you put first in a relationship, the other person will put first as well. And likewise, whoever you put last, you can bet the other person will also put last.

So really, when you put a woman's needs and wants ahead of your own, you have no one to blame but yourself when you get treated as a second class citizen in the relationship. And women normally do not respect a guy who allows himself to be treated in a disrespectful way, even if she is the one doing it.

Another problem for the typical Nice Guy, as mentioned before, is that he wants to appear safe, predictable, and nonthreatening so that women won't think he's some kind of pervert or sex fiend. To this effect, he avoids any topic that's even remotely sexual, instead limiting his conversations with a woman to more mundane, boring, sterile topics. Then he wonders why the woman doesn't feel a romantic or sexual connection to him.

The problem using this approach is that most women aren't that attracted to safe, predictable, nonthreatening guys. They are more fascinated by guys who are exciting, sensual, and not easy to figure out. If women only wanted safe, predictable Nice Guys, rock stars would never get laid.

The Player, just like the rock star, puts his sexuality right out front. He WANTS women to view him as sensual, edgy and maybe even a little bit dangerous. He engages her in more intimate, and even somewhat risqué conversations that the Nice Guy wouldn't dream of discussing.

Unlike the typical Nice guy, who does the exact OPPOSITE thing by hiding his sexuality because he thinks being, friendly, polite and courteous is the way to a woman's heart, the Player is not afraid to aggressively try to create some sexual tension very early on.

This doesn't mean he walks up to every woman he meets and asks her to jump in the sack. He does it more through his body language and his choice of words and subject matter. He subtly uses sexual innuendo and flirting techniques that ignite the flames of desire in a woman.

The Nice Guy, on the other hand, afraid to reveal his true motives and risk instant rejection, will stay as far away as possible from anything that even hints at sex. Instead, many Nice Guys try to get close to a woman by going the friend route, hoping that eventually she will appreciate all the nice things he does for her and rush romantically into his arms.

Nice Guys are either uncomfortable with sexual feelings or believe that women are. They don't understand that romance and sex go hand in hand in a woman's mind. If you don't even attempt to create any sexual energy with a woman, you will quickly end up in a platonic "just friends" relationship and the woman will not see you in a romantic way.

Unfortunately for the Nice Guy, once you get locked into the "just friends" category, it is almost impossible to switch it over into a romance. Nice Guys don't really understand this concept and usually make the same mistake over and over again, thinking that this new girl is different from the rest.

Nice Guys do occasionally find a woman who seems as if she really likes him. The more he does for her, the more she seems to like him. Unfortunately this is mostly a mirage, and these women usually turn out to be "Users". These are women who will target a Nice Guy and basically drain him, not only financially but, physically and emotionally as well.

These women aren't necessarily bad. They are just so needy and insecure themselves that they constantly need a guy's energy and attention to sustain them. When the NICE GUY finally begins to protest, or starts to push for more back from her, she will simply disappear, leaving him high and dry with nothing to show for all his time and effort except another disappointing and bitter experience with women. Again, these Nice Guys will then complain about women being so horrible and ungrateful when really he has no one but himself to blame for being so submissive and self-sacrificing.

So do most women really not want guys just because they are NICE? The obvious answer is NO. What women don't want are the following, which I call the 7 deadly sins of "Nice Guys":

Women don't want insecure boring guys who won't challenge or excite her. They don't want a guy who won't stand up for himself or who allows himself to be manipulated. They don't want a guy who thinks so little of himself that he will put up with all her crap without speaking up or demanding some respect. They don't want a guy that is so desperate for approval that he will give in and do whatever she wants him to do. They don't want a guy who rarely speaks up or lets a woman know what he really thinks in fear of some argument or conflict that would cause her to end their relationship or contact. They don't want a guy who is too clingy and doesn't seem to have a life of his own. They don't want a guy who is just her friend because he has a hidden romantic agenda he was too afraid or insecure to reveal when they first met.

In conclusion, for all their efforts to gain approval and acceptance from a woman by constantly making sacrifices and giving into her every whim and want, it is almost always the Nice Guy who ends up waiting outside in the rain with flowers in hand, while the more fun, challenging, and confident Player is inside shagging the girl. And who can blame her.

Chapter 4

How Elite Players Get Women to Want Them

The Number 1 mystery that has baffled the regular Nice Guys since the beginning of time is why women choose Players, Bad Boys and even Jerks over them. The Number 1 solution to this mystery revolves around the art of building attraction.

The biggest problem for most guys is that they don't understand how attraction in women works. As discussed in the last chapter, most women don't prefer rude, inconsiderate guys over guys who are thoughtful and polite. The reason Players beat out the normal nice guy when it comes to getting women comes down to Players being able to create strong feelings of sensual and sexual desire.

So exactly how do Players build attraction in women?

The Player and/or Bad Boy type is able to create in a woman a romantic or sexual high by stroking and stirring her fantasies and arousing her curiosity. Even if a woman knows deep down that a particular guy is full of sh!t, or is just not a good person, her desire for the fantasy to be true can very often totally outweigh her logic, causing a normally careful woman to drop her shield and let the guy in.

Now you don't have to be a bad boy, jerk, or some guy who's just after sex to get a woman aroused or romantically high. You just need to understand how attraction in women works and how to spark it.

As we stated earlier, Elite Players know that it's NOT looks, brains, or money that ultimately gets a woman's heart pounding and toes tingling. They know that what actually attracts a woman to a guy is HOW HE MAKES HER FEEL.

So how does this work and what does the normal guy do wrong?

A good analogy would be to compare building attraction to starting a fire. Once you get a spark, you have to slowly and carefully feed it, first with small twigs and later with larger and larger branches until you eventually build that initial spark into a raging blaze. If at the first spark you just throw a giant log on top of it, you're going to immediately smother it and it's gone forever.

Unfortunately, it's this last thing that most guys do when they connect with a girl. At the first sign of a romantic spark, they will immediately start smothering the girl with all kinds of attention. Trying to set up multiple dates, calling or texting her several times a day, and buying her presents or flowers for no reason. When the woman inevitably tries to slow things down, or just pulls back a bit to catch her breath, the guy will panic and start smothering her even more.

As he gets more clingy and demanding of her attention, the woman will finally become repulsed by the whole thing and break it off. The now emotionally destroyed guy will then try to figure out what happened, and usually ends up blaming the woman for "playing games". This type of behavior many times stems from a guy's low self-esteem. But, even more so, it comes from a misunderstanding about how to create and sustain attraction in a woman.

PLAYERS know that building attraction is a process, and they don't let their emotions run away with them at the first signs that a woman is interested in them. After they make their initial impact on her, they stay cool by giving the woman only a small bit of themselves at a time.

The hotter the woman, the more she will start to feel a bit insecure if a guy she just met isn't fawning all over her like all the other guys she encounters. What this also does is give him a much higher status in a woman's mind over the guys who are constantly buying her gifts and spending loads of money to “win” her affections.

On future dates or encounters with a woman he connects with, the Elite Player will intensify this sexual tension by giving out mixed signals about his level of interest in her. The longer this goes on, the more intrigued and attracted she becomes. Eventually it is her, not him, who is pushing for more both romantically and physically. The Elite Player then just sits back and lets the action come to him.

Of course, many women will call this type of behavior “game playing”, yet they almost always are more attracted to a guy they have to work to impress than a guy who gives himself over way too easily. The truth is, people always want what they can't have, or what they perceive to have the highest value or status. This status is determined by, for lack of a better word, Power.

Many guys tend to have an overly romantic and fantasy driven view of relationships that keep them from dealing with women like they would deal with other things in their life. Getting what you want in a romantic relationship like anything else involves negotiations and power, or at least perceived power.

By letting your feelings for a woman who you just met get carried away, you end up giving all your power to her right from the start. It's like buying a used car. Once you let the salesman know you can't live without a particular car, you lose all negotiating power and will end up paying much more than if you would have just held back and let the salesman earn your approval.

Another big mistake that many guys make is trying to convince a girl of how much alike and compatible they are. These guys will suggest that because they like the same things and share some of the same views that they are a perfect match and should hook up.

There are 2 things wrong with this approach. One is that women don't necessarily want someone just like themselves, and the other is that most women are naturally resistant to what they see as a sales pitch. The more you try to convince a woman of something, the more arguments she will find against it, even if many of her arguments don't appear to make sense or even seem logical to you.

Thus the more arguments you try to make for the two of you to be together, the more reasons she will find why you shouldn't. No matter how much she seemed to like you when you first met, by constantly trying to convince her you belong together, she will eventually decide that for some reason you're just not right for each other and break it off.

Knowing how women think, the EXPERT PLAYER will constantly point out how different they are, and how they really have no compatibility what so ever, even if they are very much alike. What this does is put the woman on the opposite side of the argument, and gets her trying to convince him that they are soul mates.

Bad Boys do this as well, only probably not intentionally. The more a Bad Boy tells a girl how bad he is and that he is no good for her, the more she will hang on, usually becoming completely invested in "fixing" him.

This gets compounded by all her friends and relatives saying he's bad, and how she needs to leave him. The more she hears this, the more determined she will be to stay and try to change him, no matter how bad it gets. She will do this with the intent of proving him and everyone else wrong.

Another attraction of a Bad Boy is that women like a challenge. What's more challenging then changing her lump of coal Bad Boy into a successful, caring golden boy? Not only does she prove all the doubters wrong, but her now reformed Bad Boy will owe everything to her and be committed to her forever.

Reforming a Bad Boy is like finding some old, presumably worthless item at a flea market and uncovering a valuable antique. This is so much more fun and challenging then just going in and paying full price for something that has no mystery or intrigue whatsoever . How can the regular guy compete with that?

Chapter 5

Approaching Women Like an Elite Player

Most guys, when working up the courage to approach a woman they are interested in, treat the situation as if it's life or death. Even before they say their first word to her, many guys have already started fantasizing about their future life together.

Dating, sex, marriage, and all other types of romantic notions start floating around in their brain. As a result, these guys end up putting so much pressure on themselves that they either lose their nerve to approach any woman or totally blow it if they do.

If they actually do get a woman to start talking to them, or even showing the slightest interest in them, most guys have so few romantic options that they feel the need to latch on to her like she is the last lifeboat on the Titanic.

Besides putting pressure on themselves, they are putting tremendous pressure on the woman as well. No woman wants a guy hanging all over her for dear life. And no matter how much she may have liked you at first, if you start acting all needy and clingy, she's going to pull away from you in record time.

Copyright© 2008—David Curtis-www.alphadater.com-All Rights Reserved

So how does this life or death mindset differ from the mindset of a Player when he meets a woman? Players are called Players because they like to PLAY. Unlike the typical Nice Guy who always seems to get way too serious way too fast after meeting a woman, the Player keeps things playful and flirty. And rather than looking out to the future, he stays in the moment and just concentrates on creating a fun, memorable experience for her.

Because he has plenty of options, the Player doesn't get too excited or worked up when he meets a new woman. She is just one in a string of hot women he is connecting with on a regular basis. It's very much a case of "the rich getting richer".

The Player is much more relaxed and in control of his emotions and can easily walk away from a woman at any moment. A woman will intuitively pick up on this vibe, making the Player much more challenging and attractive to her than an insecure, clingy Nice Guy she can easily manipulate and even abuse, knowing he will put up with it.

Since the Player doesn't get too invested in any one girl too early on, he is able to approach and talk with women in a much lighter and carefree manner. This makes him seem much more fun and exciting than the needy guy who, in contrast, seems way too uptight and nervous.

When talking to a woman, the normal Nice Guy puts his status below hers and spends his whole time seeking approval from her and allowing the woman to qualify him. Usually, the Nice Guy won't even approach a woman unless he receives some kind of "GO" signal that the woman may be interested in him. This signal rarely ever comes leaving most guys on the outside looking in.

Players, in contrast, don't seek approval or qualification from a woman. It's the Player that qualifies her. And the Player doesn't seek permission or wait for the "GO" signal from a woman before he makes his move. He just confidently approaches and starts talking to her.

As noted earlier, most women are much more attracted to guys they can't manipulate and who are strong enough to handle her moods. While Nice Guy types suck up to a hot woman and will put up with almost anything she dishes out, the Player will let a woman know earlier on that he will not put up with her crap, no matter how hot she is.

Being an Elite Player takes discipline. Elite Players are the masters of keeping their emotions under control. Like the designated driver at a party, the Elite Player is the figurative designated driver of the relationship, staying sober, alert, and controlled while letting the girl enjoy the highs of her emotional intoxication. You need to sacrifice a little fun fantasizing, but it will be worth it in the end.

The Number One thing to remember when approaching or dealing with women is to keep things fun and light. Not only do you want the women to enjoy themselves, but more importantly you want to enjoy yourself as well. Believe me, if you're a fun, challenging guy, women will want to hang with you.

Chapter 6

How Elite Players Get Women into Bed

So, how is the Elite Player able to get women to sleep with him so frequently and easily, while the rest the guys out there feel lucky just to get a good night kiss on the cheek.

The common theory is that successful Players are just smooth talkers, but there are actually several reasons why Players are more successful seducing women than the average guy.

The Elite Player knows how to create instant electricity in a woman. Many times it is just something he says, or the way he says it. But it also may be the way he looks at her, or a light touch of the hand or arm that triggers this electricity. Usually it's a combination of these things and the ability to create a fun, memorable experience for the woman that sets him apart from any other guy she has ever met before.

Though there is some truth to the smooth talker belief, it is more accurate to say that Elite Players are more upfront with their intentions. Now this does not mean that they directly suggest having sex to a woman they just met, but their choice of words and body language creates a link in the woman's mind to a more physical interaction.

As discussed earlier, Elite Players early on will steer the conversation towards more risqué or sexual topics. While discussing these topics, the Elite Player will go out of his way to challenge the woman on opinions or views she has, instantly creating some sexual tension between them. He does this in a teasing, fun way and will actually break up laughing if the woman starts taking things too seriously.

Copyright© 2008—David Curtis-www.alphadater.com-All Rights Reserved

Another little teasing thing that PLAYERS will do is to use a lot of sexual innuendo when talking to a woman, and then actually accuse her of reading "unintended" sex meanings into his "innocent" statements. When he does this right, he can get a woman laughing and punching him in the arm at the same time. When they get women doing this while telling him what a bad boy he is, the PLAYER is well on his way to scoring, probably sooner than later.

Because of their teasing, playful style many PLAYERS appear more fun than the normal guy, which women in their minds will equate with him being fun in bed as well. Probably much more fun in bed than some guy who acts way too serious or boring.

The mistake most guys make is believing that women are always just looking for a long term relationship, and that they are being duped by smooth talking PLAYERS. The truth is that most women don't want to get serious with every guy they meet. More times than not, they are just as interested in having fun and enjoying a good time with a guy in a more casual, uncomplicated relationship. Maybe just for a night, maybe a week, or maybe only a month or two.

Elite PLAYERS know this and offer the women they approach and talk to a fun time that doesn't need to lead to anything long term. I know this may shock most of those NICE GUY types who seem to put women on some kind of purity pedestal, believing that women only are interested in wholesome long term, committed relationships.

When regular guys want to get a woman to agree to sex, they will just keep turning up the heat, trying to move things to the next level. Usually when this happens, the woman's natural resistance will come into play and the harder he pushes, the more she will refuse. Finally, frustrated, the guy will start making demands, and the woman will dump him.

In contrast, ELITE PLAYERS may say stuff like, "Don't go thinking I'm going to sleep with you before we've had at least 10 dates and you've met my mother". This is a fun way to turn the tables on women who normally have to fend off most guys sexual advances.

And by working contrary to what women expect a guy to say, the ELITE PLAYER is able to instill such a lust and flaming desire in a woman that eventually she is literally tearing his clothes off while he is still protesting.

What the ELITE PLAYER also does is to push forward and then pull back a bit to draw the woman in. Then he will turn up the heat a little more, then pull back again. The more he does this, the more the sexual tension builds up. This keeps going until the woman is so wound up, that she is just as ready as he is to release the tension and get physical.

Copyright© 2008—David Curtis-www.alphadater.com-All Rights Reserved

Even for the normal guy who knows what he is doing, this process could take days or weeks. The ELITE PLAYER, however, can sometimes complete the entire process in a matter of a few hours, sometimes even less.

So why would a sweet, smart, logical girl sleep with some guy she knew was either a Player, Bad Boy, or just a one night stand? Maybe the most important thing that ELITE PLAYERS know is that under the right circumstances most women will allow themselves to be ruled by their “emotions of the moment”. Meaning, if they feel it, they are compelled to do it, regardless of the consequences. If there is any guilt or shame involved, they will usually just deal with it later.

So when a woman sleeps with a guy she just met, or sleeps with some guy who she knows is probably a Player, she usually is able to rationalize it to herself afterwards, either saying she had a moment of weakness or that she deserves to have some fun once in awhile.

So equipped with this knowledge, Elite Players are expert at knowing exactly how to take a woman where she wants to go both physically and emotionally, easily overcoming any resistance she may have along the way. To illustrate this point, I'll leave you with the story of a Japanese pick-up artist I read about recently:

When this pick-up artist is traveling out of town on business, he will approach attractive women at the train station asking for directions to his hotel. Instead of just having her tell him how to get there, he will gradually, street by street, step by step, get her to lead him right to his hotel, and then right up to his room. Since she has consented to each step along the journey, by the time they are in his hotel room he doesn't even have to say a word. It's just assumed that they will have sex.

Now that's an Elite Player.

Chapter 7

How Elite Players Deal With Rejection or Avoid it Completely

Do Players get rejected? The simple answer is ABSOLUTELY. In fact, they may get rejected more times in a single night than most guys have been rejected in their entire lives. The obvious reason for this is that many Players are approaching several women every night, while the regular guy may take all evening working up the courage to approach just one, and usually chickens out before he does.

So how do Players deal with the constant rejection, and how do they work up the courage to recover and do it again and again? As noted earlier, one major trait most Players have in common is a strong and secure self-confidence. They don't let other's opinion of them affect or influence them. When they approach a woman, they are not doing it to seek her approval. They are the ones who qualify the woman to determine if she is worthy of their attention.

So when a woman doesn't respond in a positive way, or doesn't tune in to a Player's teasing or playful behavior, it's the Player who writes her off and moves on to the next one. Elite Players are eventually able to avoid rejection entirely by learning not to make every encounter an all or nothing proposition. He will usually just move in on a woman, or more usually a group of women, with the purpose of just trying to create a bit of chaotic fun.

He may start teasing one or all of them, but usually zones into the woman he is most interested in. He quickly gets the topic onto something sexual or just controversial, and then just plays devil's advocate. Whatever he ends up doing, he will be sure to make it fun, interesting, and memorable for the women. He could stick around for awhile, but it's usually better to make an impact and then move on.

If he feels some chemistry with one or more of the women, he may attempt to get a phone number or email. If not, then he just excuses himself and goes off to find some fun somewhere else.

So you see, if you do things with the right frame of mind there really is no such thing as being rejected. The worst that could happen is you run into a woman who has no sense of humor, or who is not interested in interacting with anyone in the first place. In that case, she wouldn't be any fun to talk to anyway, so you just move on to someone new.

Copyright© 2008—David Curtis-www.alphadater.com-All Rights Reserved

Early on, you will have to deal with a lot of situations that just don't work out. It's not only a process of trial and error; it is also a matter of learning from your experiences and getting back out there the next time. But if you're so scared of being rejected that you don't even try to approach women, then you will never learn what works and what doesn't and you will remain an OBSERVER forever.

Chapter 8 Conclusion

Becoming an Elite Player takes work, courage, and the ability to learn from your mistakes. There is no such thing as failure. Just take something positive out of each experience and do better the next time.

What you should learn from all this is that even though you may not reside in Player territory yet, you can at least emulate the Player's mind-set. Lighten up, have some fun, keep your imagination from running away with you, and don't give up your self-respect just to get a woman to like you.

Beware of getting too impressed or intoxicated by the women you encounter. If you lose control of your emotions over a woman and allow your head to start floating in the clouds, you have already given away all your power and have virtually no chance of getting her. If you can just keep your emotions in check you will very quickly notice a change in the way women react to you. You may not be a Player yet, but you will be well on your way to improving your success with women..

For a more detailed guide to dating, be sure to get my ebook, “ Get Women Like a Bad Boy Without Being a Jerk ”. This powerful book will not only give you a step-by-step process for approaching, talking with, and dating all the women you've always wanted, but you will learn secrets about attracting women that most guys will never know or understand. You don't have to be a jerk to get the hottest women in town. Get your copy today.

I also provide the dating and relationship coaching you need to get all the women you want, or just get that one girl you can't seem to live without. Coaching rates and plans available for all financial situations.

For more dating and relationship advice, make sure to visit www.alphadater.com .
Good Luck and let me hear from you.

David C.